Course title: Fate and History: István Szabó's Cinema, Film History Seminar

Course convenors: Tibor Hirsch

Class time and place: Tuesday 16:00-17.30 -137

Course type: Seminar

Course content: István Szabó in his whole career was focusing on the unprepared individual being forced to meet with the always hostile East-European history.

In the films made from the early 60's Szabó depicts different sorts of surviving strategies of the average civilian when this XX. Century's history - unpredictable fate embodied by the series of well-known severe political events – "is arriving". These strategies here in this geographical region are always desperate, always deniable - and sometimes they are adopted just too late.

In Szabo's films we can understand and reconstruct the typical world view of people living in the region (especially in the urban Hungary) who tried to defend themselves against the threats above. This very civilian attitude had different psychologically motivated components: all of them used for survival. As we can see from the films, these survival techniques could be different depending on the period (listed above) when they were adopted, and on the people who actually used them. They are different and still - in the examinable films - there are one common world-view and attitude as a basic frame, which helps Szabó to describe ordinary city folk, young Hungarian intellectuals and German artists as well.

To prove all these we will analyse Szabo's unique urban visual poetry and his very special psychological realism.

Requirements: First classes are rather lectures – and the basic points of the "East-European survival attitude" are explained and shown in the films. Classes later are rather seminars – and students are expected to analyse films in independent presentations, using the common social-historical approach. Completing the course successfully students will obtain some basic knowledge of István Szabó's films, and also the social-historical view of the time and the region these films are reflecting on.
