Course content: After a short theoretical introductory survey, the class will offer an extensive amount of film analysis concentrating on the narrative aspects of motion picture. This practice is partly based on the former analysing experiences and theoretical knowledge of the students concerning the vision- and montage-layers of cinema, so the completion of the film analysis courses on image and editing/montage is a suggested prerequisite. The course will give an introduction to such structural elements of film narration as introduction, turns and episodes, resolution, will discuss the concepts and functioning of motivation, dramatic arc and temporal construction. Students will also analyse such aspects of film narration as omniscience, communicativeness and self-consciousness.

Weekly topics:

09. 12. Basic concepts of narration

09. 26. The introduction and its functions

10. 03. Different types of introduction

10. 10. The setup, different approaches to story construction

10. 14. Extra class: The motivation, turns and episodes

Requirements: Class participation: continuous attendance and in-class activity is required. No more than three missed classes are permitted.

Students are required to hold in-class presentations about topics given by the instructor during which they demonstrate the ability to recognize and interpret the device in question.

During the semester, students will write a mid-term essay of a given film and an in-class film analysis of a screened sequence chosen by the instructor at the end of the term. In these written analyses, students have to demonstrate that they can understand, recognize and interpret the elements of filmic narration.

Evaluation will be based on all these requirements.
